Wife With Him in Jail?

Mrs. Sheila Wynne, wife of Greerille Wynne, the British business man imprisoned for eight years in Russia for acting as a courier in the spy case of Oleg Penkovsky, Russian science official, who was executed, said she would join her husband in jail if it were possible. She met with her jailed husband and later told newsmen that she understood that some Russian prisoners may be joined by their wives in prison—"we went into all this but the rule apparently doesn't apply to foreigners. If it proved possible for me to live with him, I would certainly say yes."

James Bond—A Smush

James Bond a faker? "I had read all about James Bond and I wanted to see what his life was really like," said 25-year-old John Teeven, a British coal miner and former Royal Air Force corporal who slipped back into the old uniform and crossed into East Berlin with a story about having important secrets to sell.

East German Communist officials "swallowed my story hook, line and sinker." At a posh villa he was "treated like a king" while wine and dined—until young Teeven said he would speak only to SMERSH (the bad guys in the Ian Fleming books) and the East Germans went, approximately, SMASH, and sent the young man back to West Berlin without money or his passport.

"A good show," said Teeven, "but there were no beautiful girls like you read about in the James Bond books. I was a bit disappointed about that."
